One thing state and federal regulators can agree upon this year is the perceived need for laws regulating the storage, use and sale of personal consumer information and data. California alone has considered over 119 amendments to the California Consumer Privacy Protection Act, as several different states pass copycat GDPR like amendments to their data privacy laws. This CCO webinar will cover:

- The basic compliance standards for data privacy policies and practices,
- Different types of data privacy certifications,
- Vendor management and contracting considerations for business partners with whom you share data,
- Communicating about these requirements with your operation team, and
- Best practices for handling consumers requesting the deletion of their data records when arguably the law does not apply to your business or offers an exception to the request.

Pricing:

Non – Member: $376 for entire series

*You will receive recorded versions of any previous webinars in this series.
