DESCRIPTION

The United States Supreme Court recently served up a deep-dish denial of a petition for review filed by Domino's Pizza Company. The Court's refusal to hear the appeal delivers a big slice of disappointment to Domino's Pizza, which asked the Supreme Court to review a crusty decision of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals which held the company's mobile app and web site be a "public accommodation" and subject to the requirements of the Americans With Disabilities Act. According to the 9th Circuit, mobile apps and web sites knead to comply with the ADA. Failing to accommodate disabilities on these platforms could cost you an extra-large amount of class-action dough. Attend this webinar to learn the best ingredients for you ADA compliance program and to prevent your company from getting burned. Extra cheese please . . . 😊
